

Industries that are newly required to keep records

The Businesses listed below have been identified by the Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA), as those must maintain OSHA 300, 300A and 301 logs even though they were exempt in the past.

Activities related to real estate
Automobile dealers
Automotive parts, accessories, and tire stores
Bakeries and tortilla manufacturing
Beer, wine, and liquor stores
Building material and supplies dealers
Commercial and industrial machinery and equipment rental and leasing
Community food and housing, and emergency and other relief services
Consumer goods rental
Direct selling establishments
Facilities support services
Individual and family services
Lessors of real estate
Museums, historical sites, and similar institutions
Other ambulatory health care services
Other amusement and recreation industries
Other miscellaneous store retailers
Other personal services
Other professional, scientific, and technical services
Other support services
Performing arts companies
Promoters of performing arts, sports, and similar events
Services to buildings and dwellings
Special food services
Specialty food stores